

Christine Fredericks continually puts herself and her opinions above those of teachers, students, parents, and community members. She has been observed checking her cell phone during open meetings, laughing at public speakers who are pouring their hearts out, calling out universities for their religious affiliations, and saying teachers with degrees from those schools should not be hired. She exhibits no interest in individuals addressing the board during open call to the public, as those in attendance believe she could possibly be sleeping, and she has also requested public comment from those who support her views when she was informed there would be many comments opposing her views on opening schools. Her behaviors and unwillingness to acknowledge her constituents' views rather than her own have made many community members believe she is the wrong person for the job. Christine is also complicit in breaking open meeting laws. Some of these laws, which she should be well aware of having served on the board previously as president, include, but are not limited to: capping the number of community members allowed in an open meeting, presenting false information, not allowing for ADA accommodations, and utilizing electronic communication during open meetings.
